Lunar Love: Moon-Related Travel Experiences Are on the Rise

21 August, 2017 by CARRIE BELL

Being enthralled by the moon is hardly a phase.

Throughout history and around the world, the glowing ball in the sky has been worshipped, studied, painted, photographed, feted, landed on, feared, blamed for werewolves, used for navigation, agriculture, and hunting, and name-dropped in hundreds of songs, stories, films, and TV series. Everyone from Ancient Greeks and Mayans to multiple modern-day Native American, Inuit, and African tribes has had legends involving or explaining it, its cycle, and its various sizes and colours. In astrological circles, it represents our deepest personal needs, basic habits, and our unconscious mind as well as fertility, our inner child, and our inner mother. At the very least, it controls the tides and is mesmerizing to look at.

Next week, Earth's satellite is inspiring hundreds of thousands of people to skip school and work, travel thousands of miles, and spend similar amounts of dollars just to witness the celestial orb block out its shinier sky-mate and cast its shadow down below as it makes its way from coast to coast.

Lucky for you, moon mania doesn't have to end with the total solar eclipse as there are plenty of places and programs that allow travellers to celebrate the myth, mystery, and majesty of the moon year round.

2 Stellar Spa

The name and entire pampering philosophy at the Luna y Mar Spa at The Resort at Pedregal in Cabo San Lucas, Mexico, is inspired by the moon. Upon entering the facility, guests drink a moon face potion, the ingredients of which are picked based on the current station of the moon. For example, if a new one is on the rise, the elixir will be filled with salt and spices and other flavors to awaken and invigorate the body and mind. Treat yourself to one of the signature concoctions to represent four lunar phases (awakening, nourishing, calming, and restoring moons) and their connection to the earth. The rituals aim to realign clients' systems and spirits with nature's rhythms.
